

The Feng Shui of the Chinese New Year

Michele Lewis, CFSP

As our new year begins, we have another celebration—the Chinese Lunar New Year. This is honored and celebrated each year on the new moon of the first lunar month. And what a celebration it is!

This is a time for cleaning out the old and welcoming in the new. In the days preceding the huge dinner and reunion, many in new clothes and shoes, possibly a new haircut, symbolizing a new start.

On February 19, 2015, we welcome the year of the wood sheep (goat or ram) and what an exciting year this could be! The sheep is considered an auspicious animal sign in Chinese for innovative restructuring in education. Care must be taken to ensure that the changes are positive and forward moving. In the world arena, there may be calls for war or other mayhem, but the peaceful nature of the sheep will prevail, putting constraints on negative and violent tendencies.

Aggression will not have the ability to change things as it has had in the past. Good old-fashioned common sense and a logical strategy will prevail. This will affect families too—now is an excellent time to unite and put old disagreements aside. Forgiveness can bring much healing.

There is much potential for advancements in technology and space exploration this year. Whatever these new discoveries bring will enhance life and have the power to change how we view both our world and the world beyond. Our perception of the universe and how it all works could take a drastic shift.

Overall, 2015 promises great, positive changes. We have much opportunity to transform negative to good, to invite innovation and advancement into our personal lives, into our commu-

New Year, houses are thoroughly cleaned of not only physical dirt, but also the poor luck of the past year, to welcome the newly arrived good luck. Of course, all the brooms are put away before New Year's Day so that the great fortune that is come cannot be swept away. Families will then begin their celebrations with a Astrology—their peaceful nature and kind heart keeps good fortune smiling upon them. This year has much potential for great good. The year of the Yui Wei—the 32nd year of the green wood ram (sheep) is seen as one of good fortune and wellbeing, for its hard work ensures prosperity.

This year has the potential nities, our nation, and into the planet as a whole. The potential to resolve conflict is high and the ability to change the world for the good is written in the stars. Prosperity and economic upturn will allow many to breathe a sigh of relief and build hope for the future. 2015 is guaranteed to be an exciting year for everyone! ■
