

ORGONITES

Purifying Your Environment

Boyd Badten

A few years ago, a dear friend sent me a pyramid made of clear epoxy resin, metal shavings, lapis stones and a quartz crystal that she bought at a gem show. I did not know what it was, but I regarded it as new age artwork at the time. I placed it in front of my computer monitor so that I would notice it each day and send thoughts of appreciation to my friend.

I then began to notice that I was sleeping very deeply through the night, despite decades of insomnia. I also noticed that the stream of thoughts and emotions which I experience “from humanity,” but which are not my personal thoughts and feelings, was dramatically more quiet and peaceful. This continued for weeks but I did not know what had caused the change. About 3 weeks later, a co-worker made a casual remark in an email about “orgonites” and I immediately googled it. I discovered that the little pyramid I had received was an orgonite, and the shift in energy in my living space started with and perhaps was even caused by the pyramid.

WHAT ARE ORGONITES?

Orgonite is a word that was invented by Karl Hans Welz for a material he made as a variation on the technology of Wilhelm Reich. The word orgonite comes from “orgone,” the name given by Reich to vital energy found everywhere in nature. It is life energy, also called Ch'i, Prana or Aether. This vital energy exists, in a natural way, under many different forms and it fuels life and especially all creative activities in living beings. Negative human thoughts and feelings, as well as EMF or radio frequency devices and industrial infrastructure, imprint harmful patterns upon orgone energy. Most of the modern electronic devices we use each day create fields of negative energy around them, making people feel ill or making concentration and sleeping difficult.

Reich discovered orgone could be attracted and concentrated using layers of metal and organic material. He built large boxes using layers of these materials that people sat inside, in order to increase the amount of prana in their bodies as an aid to healing. Orgonite is a combination of metal particles suspended in a resin matrix. It's different from Reich's accumulators in that an orgonite transmutes the negative imprinting upon the energy, instead of merely accumulating whatever prana is available, good or bad.

Orgonite was later taken to the next level by Don and Carol Croft when they added quartz crystals and molded the pieces into specific shapes to help purify a region of negatively imprinted prana. The Crofts popularized the practice of “gifting” to clean up cities of EMF pollution by secretly putting orgonites called “tower busters” near cell phone towers, microwave relay installations, electric grid transformer stations, nuclear power plants and anything that Carol, a gifted clairvoyant, could see was radiating darkened energy. One of Don's most important inventions is the “Chembuster,” a large orgonite with copper pipes pointing upward to focus purified energy into the high atmosphere and overcome the effects of Chemtrails.

BENEFITS OF ORGONITES IN YOUR LIFE

People who place orgonites in their living or working spaces have often reported experiences of feeling better both physically and spiritually, an easing of friction in their relationships, vivid dreams and deeper sleep, enhanced meditation and greater peace. How does it do this? There are a number of explanations given by clairvoyants, but a good way to think of it goes like this: pranic energy, being feminine in nature, is attracted to organic materials, such as the polyester resin, epoxy, wax, etc. used in orgonites.

In turn, the pranic energy is somewhat attracted to the metal particles, but then is repelled vigorously at the point of touching or passing through the metal. The prana particle continues this way and is further accelerated in velocity at each encounter with the metal particles in the mixture, until it is raised in frequency to a state into and beyond the zero point (above the etheric plane). It then gently descends in frequency and appears as glowing, blue-white, purified/transmuted prana which is then imprinted with the intention and the beautiful qualities of the quartz or other gemstones in the matrix of the orgonite. In this way, the negative imprinting upon this life-sustaining, pranic energy is transmuted and returned to a pristine state, such as it was when the sun first sent it to the Earth.

I have personally made thousands of orgonites over the last few years, and I've done a lot of experimenting with shapes, sizes, materials and intention. I find that before the resin has hardened, it is possible to imprint beautiful intentions, blessings and the patterns of the Solfeggio tones into the crystalline matrix of the resin. These factors, along with the gemstones, become a permanent influence upon the purified energy emanating from them and allow them to be used for specific purposes.

Try bringing one into your home and experiment with an orgonite. Try moving it into different locations and take notice of how you feel for a few days. Talk to it as if it is sentient, which it is. Ask it to do specific purifying or protective work for you. ■
