

Brief History of C60

- 1979: Buckminster Fuller describes and predicts the Carbon 60 (C60) molecule.
- 1985: C60 is discovered by scientists Robert F. Curl, Harold W. Kroto and Richard E. Smalley.
- 1992: C60 is found to exist naturally in shungite.
- 1996: Nobel Prize awarded for C60 discovery.
- 1997: C60's significant medicinal applications, e.g. antioxidant properties so powerful they reversed symptoms of ALS in rats (Dugan, et. al. 1997).
- 1998: C60 shown to inhibit the replication of the HIV virus in rats (Brettreich and Hirsch 1998; Schuster, et. al. 2000).
- 2007: C60 shown to kill cancer cells (Liu, et. al. 2007).
- 2007: C60 many medical benefits are noted (International Journal of Nanomedicine).
- 2012: Researchers test the toxicity of C60 on rats. Not only did they not die, but the rats given C60 in olive oil also lived 90% longer.
- 2012–Present: Research continues on the best ways to make C60. FullerLife Bio-active C60 is produced based on the latest research.

Carbon 60 (C60) is the most powerful antioxidant known to exist on the planet. Antioxidants enhance and moderate immune function. Antioxidants represent a therapeutic option to fight viruses and to combat aging.

Free radicals are useful at a low level; however, they become elevated to unhealthy levels by pollutants (air, water, food), air travel (cosmic radiation), intense exercise, increased exposure to
