During our cold snap, my shop was so cold that even with multiple layers of clothes, including long johns, ski socks, fleece, and wool, I was freezing! The table temperature was 48 degrees, and it got to the point where I had to wear my long Siberian parka, hat and gloves. Each night, I returned home chilled. Never a good feeling. Then the slight tickle in the back of the throat started. Arghhh! (Insert expletive of your choice here.) It was time to close the store for a few days until the temperature rose above zero.

Regardless, I am so grateful for a furnace that now works, hot water in the bath to thaw me, countless blankets and quilts, and our very own Divine Inspired Spice. Just as with the first time when I was sick, back in 2015, I loaded myself up with the divinely inspired creation, and for whatever reason, the spice hits in just the right spot in the back of the throat and relieves the tickle. It tastes pretty good too.

I don't mean to toot my own horn here, but toot toot! (Thanks, Natalie.) I have gotten a slight bit wiser since the spice blend came to me, and now as soon as I feel the slightest bit off, I start with major amounts of Divine Inspired Spice tea. I put anywhere from 1/4 teaspoon to one teaspoon of spice in hot water, and sometimes I add local honey, but often I'll simply drink the spiced water, and for whatever reason, it works!. A small disclaimer here, I don't drink the dregs that accumulate at the bottom.

The absolute last thing I need as a single store owner and manufacturer during a pandemic is to catch a stinking cold! Thanks to the divinely concocted "nectar of the gods," I kicked that tickle to the curb and am feeling great! The temperature is climbing, and spring is (maybe) approaching.

Stop by the shop to see what's new. Okay, I'll tell you, I'm now serving the above described, Nectar of the Gods (Divine Inspired Spiced Tea), coffee drinks featuring our award-winning Mexican Hot Chocolate Latté, or Epiphany Hot Chocolate. Mention this article, and receive a FREE Mexican Hot Chocolate Latté, or without the fine brew simply as the Mexican Hot Chocolate, or even a Nectar of the Gods (spiced tea).

Just another way to add flavor to your journey. While you're here, pick up our FREE food and drink recipes for the spices. In Livingston, we're located in the Park Place Building (next to Katabatic Brewery) and down the hall, or enter through the alley and walk right into the shop. ■
